

Automating AP: How a Regional Credit Union Halved its Invoice Processing Costs

With BerkOne's help, one regional credit union rose above the competition with a strategic focus on cost control and efficiency achieved through streamlined operational procedures and workflows.

THE CHALLENGE

A regional credit union was struggling with an inefficient manual accounts payable process that was time-consuming and resulted in approval and reporting bottlenecks. The credit union processed invoices using cumbersome, manual data entry procedures. This paper-based workflow required review and approvals from department to department prior to an invoice getting fully approved for payment. In addition to the time lost waiting for paper copies of invoices to physically reach their destinations, human error was rampant, which delayed approval even further. And the intensive manual workloads required a bloated AP department meaning high labor costs.

As a result, the credit union was saddled with late payment fees and payment discrepancies, and early discounts were practically unheard of. The lack of transparency between departments meant that decision-making was fragmented instead of cohesive. Finally, the cost to process invoices was approximately $25 per invoice jeopardizing the credit union's ability to maintain competitively-priced loan products aimed at cost-conscious borrowers. They decided to engage BerkOne and its expertise at streamlining business processes for leading companies around the world.

THE BERKONE SOLUTION

BerkOne proved to be a perfect business partner, working closely with the credit union to fully understand its AP challenges so they could tailor a solution that was easy to implement and cost-effective. BerkOne also offered both on-premise and hosted deployment options for its industry-leading automation platform, AP Connected.

The credit union opted for application hosting, leveraging BerkOne's AP automation know-how to improve its process without having to hire trained IT personnel or make large capital investments in software. BerkOne handled the entire end-to-end rollout and ongoing management for a reasonable implementation fee that covered initial programming of the solution to the credit union's specifications.

The new solution accepts scanned invoice files and a vendor master feed from the credit union for improved data accuracy, checks for data integrity and verification into key index fields, and integrates the information feed into their ERP system.

Easy-to-configure reporting, real-time dashboards, preset approval alerts for authorized users and intuitive exception identification and adjustment have virtually eliminated the manual processes typically performed by AP staff. Multiple, unique invoice types no longer require manual reconciliation — the system recognizes and processes them intelligently, and handles credit memos and adjustments with dynamic business rule functionality.

THE RESULTS

With BerkOne's AP Connected automation solution, the credit union shortened the paper-based process from nearly a month to a few days, significantly reduced the opportunity for human error and cut the cost to process an invoice by more than 50%. The automated process also allowed the credit union to earn early discounts, avoid late fees and slash labor costs dramatically. This improved cash flow position enabled them to re-shift their strategic focus into other areas such as portfolio and customer service innovation, which further enhanced their market position and allowed them to offer competitively-priced products coupled with ample credit limits for borrowers.
